CITY SERGEANT.

TO THE PEOPLE OF ALEXANDRIA CITY.—I take this method of announcing myself a candidate for re-election to the office of City Sergeant. Two years ago you appoint: ed me to fill this place in a manner so flattering to myself that I feel now, as I did then, that my best efforts could never discharge the obligations under which you have placed me. For that manifes ation of your confidence and regard.
I have lab red to julfill the duties of the office so that no one should regret the selection you then made, and, I hope I have done so acceptably to all. If I have met your approbation in the past and should receive your endorsement again I can only pledge a continuance of the same official conduct in the future. I believe I have dis charged my duties to the satisfaction of the court, the attornies, the juries and all others having business relations with the courts as well as to the public, and in asking your renewed support I am confident that no dereliction can be charged against me. I have always endeavored to act fairly, to make no distinction, to do no injustice to any one, and to be an impartial public officer. I, therefore, ask your undivided support in the approaching election, and, if it should be your pleasure to elect me, it will be mine a ways to faithfully subserve your truest in-

The following remarkable sketch of the career of Lientenant Do Rudio of Custer's old Seventh Cavalry, now stationed at Bismarck, W. T., is told by a correspondent: -De Rudio is the man who, with Sergeant O'Neil, had such a marvelous two days' experience in the midst of the hostile Sioux two years ago, keep. ing them at bay from cover with a repeating rifle for hours; then traveling their country for two days without food or knowledge of their situation. De Rudio was originally an officer in the Austrian army, but was expelled and exiled for sympathy with the oppressed Italians. Louis Napoleon had belonged to the Italian association of patriots, had proven a traitor, and was then, in 1858, in the way of a successful political revolution. His death would turn all Europe topsy turvy, and give the oppressed a hearing. On the 10th of January, 1858, Da Rudio dropped into Paris. He was there by appointment. He was a fellow conspirator of Felice Orsini. It was planned that the Emperor should die at one of his grand balls, at the hand of a guest's dagger. De Rudio called that ignoble, assassination, oriminal. He said : "Kill him when he is surrounded by his lancers in the public street, when he has every gaard thrown around his imperial person! The plot was changed, and, the now historical scene of January 14, 1858, followed. De Rudio's book gives a picture of the drama in front of the Grand Opera House that is remarkably distinct. The were five hand grenades, or bombehells. to be thrown-three into the royal carriage and one some distance in front and one in the rear, to keep back the crowd until the conspirators were sure of their work and escape. The E'nperor's carriage, with the Emperor and Empress Eugenie in it, approached the grand stairway of the opera-house through a file of lancers on either side. De Rudio says he was standing immediately behind the soldiers when the carriage came up, watching the con-spirator who was commissioned to throw the first grenade. When he saw his aim make a curve through the air, De Rudio dropped to the ground; quick as the explosion occurred he raised himself up and tossed his grenade over the heads of the lancers, and again dropped, waiting for Orsini to throw the third one; but Orsini was blinded by the smoke from De Rudio's shell and wounded in the head; this miss of Orsini kept the other conspirators from throwing their grenades until it was too late; one more was thrown out of its order. De Rudio's shell fell under the front wheels, killing the horse, the coachman, and tearing out the whole side of the carriage. There was the wildest dismay. It was an attack in the dark. The lancers fell back, the crowd scattered, the borses plunged to the right and left and confusion confounded reigned supreme .---

De Rudio's design was to dash through the lancers and finish his Majesty with a dagger if the gronades failed. Orsini's blindness provented the execution of that part of the plot. -

Do Rudio knew that his own life was worth:

nothing if he broke for the carriage before the third grenade was thrown. He, therefore, waited until the third explosion occurred. The delay in delivering it, and the fact that it was thrown by the fourth man instead of the third, demoralized the working of the plot and gave the lancers time to rally and surround the carriage. DeKudio saw that personal knowledge of the Emperor's death was impossible at that time. He withdraw from the scene. There had been several killed and any amount of consternation created, and our conspirator Was pretty well satisfied that the object of his attack was dead. He rapidly realized that all Paris was startled, and before sunrise all France would be. It was a night of terror in the city. The extent of the conspiracy was a secret to all except the conspirators. There was universal dread of all the possibilities of a Commune. During the night there were 51 killed and 117 wounded. The storm passed and the Emporor and Empress remained unbermed. At three o'clock in the morning DeRudio was arrested at his dgings A room mate and fellow conspirator, ledgings. A room mate and fellow conspirator, Pieri, had been arrested, and upon his relations with DeRudio, the latter was suspected and brought before the judge of instructions for a preliminary hearing. The plot covered that contingency, and in a few minutes De Rudio proved an alibi and was discharged. He was subsequently rearrested, sentenced to the guillotice, and his sentence was only commuted on the scaffold steps. He was then sentenced to the French panal settlement in Guinea, Africa, from which he escaped to America, where he joined the United States regular

A YEAR WITHOUT A SUMMER. - An aged ploughed every month of the season, and no snow fell until February 2. The winter was followed, however, by a cold, backward spring, with a snow storm in May, which killed the returning swallows. As an offset to the above story, one of the old residents of Derby tells us the year 1816 is what is known as the "year without a summer." Old New England farmers refer to it as "eighteen hundred and starved to death." Jacuary was mild, as was also February, with the exception of a few days. The greater part of March was cold and boisterous. In May ice formed half an inch thick, buds and flowers were frozen, and corn was killed. Frest, ice and soow were common in June. Almost every green thing was killed and fruit was nearly all destroyed. Snow fell to the depth of three inches in New York and Massachusetts, and ten inches in Maine. July was accompanied with frost and ice. On the fifth ice was formed of the thickness of window glass in New York. New England and parts of Pennsylvania, and corn was nearly all destroyed in certain sections. In August ice formed baif an inch thick. Corn was so free n that a great deal was cut down and dried for fodder. Very little ripened in the New England and Middle States. Farmers were obliged to pay four and five dollars a spring's planting. The first two weeks of September were mild; the balance of the resident of Hartford remembers that the winter of 1829 30 surpassed this in mildness. Farmers
